OUR BUSINESS

MARMIC, now trading as CONSULMET CONSTRUCTION, was originally established in 1997 by Mr MARTIN RAUTENBACH.

Mr Rautenbach established this close corporation whilst on the Lesotho Highlands Water Project when he realised that there were very few companies specialising in primary, steel construction. In addition he realized that more and more of the larger industrial companies were making use of existing assets in those companies for further expansions.

Originally the company only specialised in steel structures, mainly dismantling of buildings and erection thereof. Soon requests were received to move backfill plants from the GOLDFIELDS area to Highlands Water Project. Today they are involved with major companies who move valuable assets from one site to another. The company has since further expanded to include erection of newly manufactured processing plants and new steel structures in their workshop situated in KLERKSDORP, NORTH WEST PROVINCE.

The company is a small outfit employing approximately 28 artisans. The fabrication factory produces components from detailed drawings according to industry quality standards, containerises and transports equipment to sites in South Africa and other remote areas of Africa.

Resources also include experienced supervisors and construction managers who are hired out as per the client's requirements. Although the company is small in size, its expertise is all-round and houses a one-stop shop.

The facility is well-equipped to produce the equipment demanded by its clients and is regularly maintained to prevent failure.

Some sites where the company has gained recent experience are detailed below:
